The amendment requires the Government Accountability Board established by the amendment to develop standards for legislative and congressional districts based on population requirements under the Wisconsin Constitution and the U.S. Constitution and requirements of federal law governing voting rights (the Voting Rights Act at present). The amendment then directs the board to draw redistricting plans in accordance with the standards. During the first 60 days after that filing, the people may file a petition for a referendum.

The petition for referendum must be filed with the Government Accountability Board established by the amendment. Certain acts, such as those providing tax levies, acts expanding the rights of the people, and emergency acts, are exempt from referendum. Emergency acts must be so designated by the legislature and pass both houses on a two-thirds vote of all members.

Petitions must be signed by electors equaling 25 percent of the vote cast for the office of governor in the most recent election and filed with the Government Accountability Board.

After validating signatures on the petition, the Government Accountability Board shall order a referendum at the next general election occurring at least 125 days after the filing of the petition with the board. No act, section, or item shall go into effect until a majority of those voting approve it. If the petition is against a portion of an act, the remainder of the act shall not be prevented from going into effect.
