HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

MEDICAL ASSISTANCE

X This ^{bill} requires DHS to establish, by rule, a method of reimbursement for providers of Medical Assistance services that are covered under the Medical Assistance program and are provided via a type of telehealth described in the bill. One of the telehealth types for which the bill requires reimbursement is when a service is a consultation between a provider at an originating site and a provider at a remote location using a combination of interactive video, audio, and externally acquired images through a networking environment. The other telehealth method, known colloquially as store-and-forward, is a service provided by an asynchronous transmission of digital clinical information through a secure electronic system from one provider to another provider. Current law requires DHS to provide reimbursement for certain mental health services provided via the type of telehealth that is a real-time communication between a Medical Assistance recipient who is with a health care provider and another health care provider.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
