Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, no person may engage in the practice of psychology without being licensed as a psychologist by the Psychology Examining Board. This bill requires the board to issue an interim psychologist license to an applicant who satisfies all of the requirements for a psychologist license, other than an experience requirement. An interim license is valid for two years or until the individual obtains a permanent license, subject to a hardship exemption prescribed by the board by rule that could allow renewals beyond two years.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
