Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Subject to certain exceptions, this bill requires a hearing instrument specialist or an audiologist, at the time of an initial examination for the fitting and sale of a hearing aid, to inform the prospective client or other purchaser about the operation and benefits of hearing aids with features, such as telecoils, that can provide a direct connection between the hearing aid and an assistive listening system. If the client or other purchaser purchases such a hearing aid, the hearing instrument specialist or audiologist must demonstrate for the client or purchaser the proper use of the technology.

In addition, the bill requires a hearing instrument specialist or audiologist, when delivering a receipt to a person supplied with a hearing aid, to include in the receipt language requiring the client or other purchaser to verify that the client or purchaser has received any required information about hearing aids with features, such as telecoils, and, if the client or purchaser has purchased such a hearing aid, that the client or purchaser has been provided the required demonstration on its use.
