Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

If enacted, this legislation would require DFI to do the following:

(1) Establish an online retirement plan marketplace. The bill requires DFI to establish and manage an online retirement plan marketplace for eligible employers and individuals, to enter a contract with a vendor to host the marketplace, and to work with other agencies in designing and managing the online marketplace. This will require DFI staff to solicit and oversee the vendor, to design the marketplace, and to develop content that educates employers and individuals on retirement plan options.

(2) Review applications of financial services firms seeking to offer retirement plans on the marketplace. The bill requires DFI to review applications from firms seeking to include their retirement plan offerings on the marketplace. DFI may only approve a plan for inclusion on the marketplace if it determines that the plan is high quality, complies with the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), charges reasonable fees, and meets other statutory requirements.

(3) Develop a marketing program to publicize and promote the marketplace. The bill requires DFI to educate and encourage both employees and employers regarding retirement savings plans, to develop a marketing program for the marketplace, and to provide outreach to employers and employees. The bill authorizes DFI to contract with a vendor to provide marketing services.

To carry out these responsibilities, DFI anticipates that it would need to add at least five staff members: an administrative manager (estimated salary, fringe, and supply costs of $110,451), two marketing specialists (estimated salary, fringe, and supply costs of $79,973 each), and two auditors with relevant subject matter experience (estimated salary, fringe, and supply costs of $89,973 each), for a total annual staff cost of $450,343.

While the scale of the marketing program will depend on the resources available, DFI does have experience working with a vendor to market the state's college savings program. That vendor is required to spend a minimum of $2.5 million annually marketing the state's college savings program. DFI has borrowed that figure as an estimate of annual marketing costs for this proposed retirement savings program.

Depending on which services and features DFI, ETF, and SWIB find to be necessary or desirable when those agencies collaborate to design the marketplace, as required by section 4 of the bill, the external vendor cost to create the online marketplace may vary substantially. For that reason, DFI is unable to fairly estimate the cost to retain a vendor to build the online marketplace.
