Description a levy limit exemption for regional emergency medical systems and eligibility for the expenditure restraint incentive program

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Generally, under current law, local levy limits are applied to the property tax levies that are imposed by political subdivisions. Current law also contains a number of exceptions to the levy limit. This bill creates an additional exception to local levy limits. Under the bill, the amounts a city, village, town, or county levies for costs associated with regional emergency medical services, either through participation in a joint emergency services district or through one or more intergovernmental agreements to provide emergency medical services, or both, are exempt. Under the bill, "regional" means consisting of a service area that is at least 232 square miles or includes at least eight municipalities. The bill also excludes expenditures of amounts levied for a regional emergency medical system from the expenditure restraint incentive program payment calculation.

The local levy limit fiscal estimate is indeterminate as the department does not know how many regional emergency medical service districts may be created under the bill. Based on 2024 preliminary data, the municipal Joint Fire or EMS levy exception totaled $1,326,700. Comparatively, debt service was the largest municipal levy exception totaling $843,687,500.

Under the bill, a municipal government currently receiving an expenditure restraint payment, would not lose eligibility as a result of joining a regional EMS district with higher comparative costs.

The department cannot absorb $100,000 in one-time administrative costs for computer programming changes, and $3,900 in annual auditing costs.
