9. Policy Problem Addressed by the Rule

To implement federal law that provides that states may re-determine a child's eligibility for child care assistance no sooner than 12 months following the initial determination or most recent redetermination.

10. Summary of the businesses, business sectors, associations representing business, local governmental units, and individuals that may be affected by the proposed rule that were contacted for comments.

The rule applies to low-income families who receive a child care subsidy under s. 49.155, Stats., and to child care administrative agencies. The notice soliciting comments on the proposed rule was sent to agencies and to a listserv of over 2000 email addresses of people and organizations that have signed up to receive child care information from the department.

11. Identify the local governmental units that participated in the development of this EIA.

An agency supervisor in Rock County commented that she sees no adverse effects of the rule.

12. Summary of Rule's Economic and Fiscal Impact on Specific Businesses, Business Sectors, Public Utility Rate Payers, Local Governmental Units and the State's Economy as a Whole (Include Implementation and Compliance Costs Expected to be Incurred)

The rule will protect working parents by requiring fewer interruptions of their employment or education for appointments and paperwork to maintain eligibility for a child care subsidy. The rule will reduce workload for child care administrative agencies. In addition, child care providers commented that they will spend less time on paperwork and with assisting parents track their eligibility review dates. One provider commented that parents should be required to have redeterminations more frequently.

13. Benefits of Implementing the Rule and Alternative(s) to Implementing the Rule

Complying with federal law.

14. Long Range Implications of Implementing the Rule

Requiring less frequent in-person eligibility redeterminations for all parents has no fiscal effect and will lessen the workload for child care administrative agencies. Parents are still required to report any change in circumstances to the agency, and the agency is required to redetermine eligibility based on the reported change.

15. Compare With Approaches Being Used by Federal Government
