Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

The Wisconsin Constitution permits the legislature to authorize certain types of gambling. A raffle conducted by a local religious, charitable, service, fraternal, or veterans' organization is a type of gambling that may be authorized. Under current law, the legislature has authorized the operation of raffles that are games of chance in which tickets are sold and drawings are held.

Under current law, the division of gaming in the Department of Administration (DOA) issues licenses to organizations that are authorized to conduct raffles. A Class A license authorizes an organization to sell tickets to the raffle on days other than the day on which the drawing will be held. A Class B license allows the sale of tickets for a raffle only on the day the raffle will be held. Under either license, an organization may hold up to 200 raffles a year or one calendar raffle a year. A calendar raffle is one where a drawing is held and a prize awarded on certain dates specified on the calendar.

This substitute amendment expands the types of raffles that may be allowed. Under the amendment, DOA must approve a type of raffle that consists of flexible plastic or rubber ducks being used in a race. Once DOA approves this type of raffle, any organization holding a Class A or Class B license may conduct duck race raffles. The substitute amendment also authorizes an organization that is licensed to hold raffles to request approval to hold a raffle that is not a regular drawing raffle or a duck race. The request for approval must include information such as a description of the method to be used for selling tickets and the type of random selection process to be used for determining winners. DOA may not approve a new type of raffle unless it determines that the raffle will comply with the requirements under current law that apply to raffles in general. These include requirements that the drawing, duck race, or other method of selecting a winner be held in public and that all of the prizes must be awarded. If DOA approves a new type of raffle, any other organization holding a Class A or Class B license may conduct this new type of raffle without seeking additional approval.
