4 for building permits, and granting rule–making authority.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This substitute amendment requires the Department of Safety and Professional Services to establish by rule an electronic processing system for building permits for new one-family and two-family dwellings. Current law allows cities, villages, towns, and counties (municipal authorities) to enact ordinances regarding the construction of such dwellings. However, an ordinance must meet the requirements of the one-family and two-family dwelling code adopted by DSPS. Current law requires DSPS to prescribe and furnish to municipal authorities a standard building permit form for such dwellings.

The substitute amendment requires DSPS, by January 1, 2017, to furnish in electronic format to municipal authorities the standard building permit form. Also, by that same date, the substitute amendment requires DSPS to establish by rule a system that allows a person to electronically submit to a municipal authority an application for a building permit for a new one-family or two-family dwelling. DSPS's rule must prescribe a standard application form to be used by applicants, except that DSPS may approve a municipal authority's use of a different form. Also, the system established by DSPS must allow a municipal authority to electronically issue building permits to applicants and electronically submit copies of issued permits to DSPS. A municipal authority must use the standard building permit form prescribed by DSPS, unless DSPS allows the municipal authority to use a different form. The substitute amendment requires a municipal authority to begin implementation of the system no later than January 2, 2018.

Beginning on the date that a municipal authority begins implementation of the system described above, the municipal authority must electronically submit to DSPS copies of the permits the municipal authority issues. A copy must be submitted no later than the 15th day of the first month beginning after issuance of a permit. In addition, if a municipal authority fails to submit a copy by the last day of that month, the municipal authority must provide a refund to the permittee. The amount of the refund must equal the difference between the following: 1) the amount the permittee paid the municipal authority for the permit; and 2) the portion of the permit fee that the municipal authority remitted to DSPS, if any.

Finally, current law prohibits a person from obtaining a building permit for a new one-family or two-family dwelling unless DSPS has issued a certificate of financial responsibility to the person. The substitute amendment requires DSPS to include in its standard building permit form a space for a municipal authority to insert the name of the person to whom the building permit is issued, as well as the number and expiration date of the certificate of financial responsibility that DSPS issued to the person.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
