Administrative attachment of HEAB and DLAB to DOA

Under current law, the Higher Educational Aids Board is an independent agency in the executive branch of state government. HEAB administers most of the state's higher education financial aid programs.

This bill attaches HEAB to DOA for administrative purposes. Under current law, a board that is attached to another agency for administrative purposes is a distinct unit of that agency and exercises its powers and duties independently of that agency, but performs budgeting, program coordination, and related management functions under the direction and supervision of that agency.

Under current law, the Distance Learning Authorization Board is administratively attached to HEAB. DLAB administers the state's reciprocity agreement governing authorization and oversight of higher education institutions that provide distance education to out-of-state students.

This bill attaches DLAB for administrative purposes to DOA instead of HEAB.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
