7 fees.

Analysis Prepared by the Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection

The Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection (“DATCP”) administers Wisconsin’s animal health and disease control program. The program is funded, in significant part, by animal health fees. This rule increases animal health fees in order to remedy a serious deficit in the animal health fee revenue account.

This rule delays most of the fee increases until mid 2009, except that fee increases for veterinary inspection forms, fish import permits, and fish farm registrations will take effect in 2008. DATCP was able to delay most fee increases because the budget act (2007 Wis. Act 20) provided temporary funding assistance of $125,000 in each year of the 2007-09 biennium (one-time transfers from the Agriculture Chemical Cleanup Program).

Statutory Authority

Statutory authority: 93.07(1), 95.55(3), 95.57(2), 95.60(5), 95.68(4) and (8), 95.69(4) and (8), 95.71(5) and (8), and 95.715(2)(d).

Statutes interpreted: 93.06(1d), (1g), (1m), (1p), (1q), 95.55, 95.57(2), 95.60(5), 95.68(4) and (8), 95.69(4) and (8), 95.71(5) and (8), and 95.715(2)(d).

DATCP has broad authority, under s. 93.07(1), Stats., to adopt rules needed to implement laws under its jurisdiction. DATCP also has authority, under the provisions cited above, to charge certain animal health fees and determine the amount of those fees.

Other Rule Changes

This rule eliminates current fish farm registration fee exemptions for research institutions and government agencies. Those entities will now have to pay the same registration fees as other fish farm operators.

Rule Effective Date

Rule provisions related to fish farm registrations, fish import permits and certifications of veterinarian inspection take effect on the rule publication date. The rest of this rule takes effect beginning on July 1, 2009. There are different annual license cycles for different types of licensed (and registered) entities, so that license (registration) fee increases do not apply until the first annual license cycle beginning after the relevant effective date.

Fiscal Estimate

State Fiscal Effect

Animal Health program operations are funded by a combination of general state tax dollars (79%), animal health fee revenues (19%) and federal funds (2%). This does not include federal funds that are passed through to program beneficiaries in the form of grants or other assistance.

Recent state budgets have done the following:

- Reduced annual GPR funding (general tax dollars) for animal health by nearly $300,000.
- Lapsed approximately $130,000 in animal health fee revenue (one-time lapse) to the state general fund.
- Assigned more staff to be paid from animal health fee revenues.

Program costs have gone up this year, as DATCP has filled critical animal health positions that had been held vacant. DATCP has only about 37 authorized permanent positions (field and office positions) for its entire animal health and disease control program, so it is important that key positions be filled.

As a result of these combined factors, the positive cash balance in the animal health fee revenue account is declining rapidly. DATCP collects about $300,000 in animal health fees each year, and projects fee revenue expenditures approaching $600,000 each year. Even with the temporary funding assistance of $125,000 in each year of the 2007-09 biennium DATCP projects a negative cash balance of $85,000 in the animal health fee revenue account beginning in FY 2008, $241,000 in FY 2009, $545,00 in FY 2010 and $877,000 in FY 2011.

This rule will increase animal health fee revenues by approximately $149,000 in FY 2008-09. When it is fully implemented beginning in FY 2009-10, it will increase annual fee revenues by approximately $375,150. DATCP projects that this fee increase will stabilize animal health program staffing and funding through 2012, without further fee increases.

Without this fee increase or other funding support, DATCP will need to reduce animal health staffing at a time when bio-security and disease threats have grown. DATCP has only about 37 permanent staff for all of its animal health and disease control programs (does not count temporary, federally-funded positions). Staff reductions will increase risks to Wisconsin's major livestock industries, which rely on effective animal health and disease control programs. Staff reductions will also increase disease risks to humans and wildlife.

Local Fiscal Effect

This rule will have no fiscal impact on local units of government. See fiscal estimate attached.

Business Impact

This rule affects animal markets, animal dealers, animal truckers, livestock farmers, deer farmers, fish farmers and veterinarians. Many of these businesses are "small businesses" as defined in s. 227.114(1)(a), Stats.

This rule increases some current animal health fees, and creates some new fees. Some fee increases may affect several sectors of the livestock industry, while others are limited to specific livestock sectors.

The proposed fee increases will increase industry costs by a combined statewide total of approximately $375,150 per year for all affected industries, once the rule is fully implemented. The projected impact by industry sector is shown in Appendix B. Fee increases for individual businesses are generally modest, and depend on business size and type. Smaller businesses generally pay lower fees than large businesses. Fees are based, in part, on animal health costs related to each affected industry.

This rule does not change other animal health regulations. This rule requires no additional recordkeeping, and no added professional services to comply. For small businesses, the effective date of this rule is automatically delayed by 2 months, pursuant to s. 227.22(2)(e), Stats. The delayed effective date is not expected to have a significant impact on the timing or amount of fee collections under this rule.

Federal Regulation

DATCP administers animal disease control programs in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service ("the federal bureau"). Federal grants pay for about 2% of Wisconsin's animal health program operations. This does not include federal funds that are passed through to program beneficiaries in the form of grants or other assistance.

The federal bureau has well-established control programs for historically important diseases such as tuberculosis and brucellosis. The federal bureau has less well-developed programs for new or localized diseases, or emerging animal-based industries. In those areas, states often play a leadership role. For example, Wisconsin is a recognized national leader in the regulation of farm-raised deer (chronic wasting disease) and aquaculture.

States have independent authority to regulate animal health and movement, including imports from other states. However, states strive for reasonable consistency, based on standards spelled out in federal regulations. States typically incorporate federal standards where they exist, and play a key role in implementing federal standards.

The federal bureau does not license animal businesses, or regulate state fees. This fee rule does not duplicate or conflict with any federal fees or standards.

Surrounding State Programs

Surrounding state animal health programs are broadly comparable to those in Wisconsin, but differ in a number of ways. State programs reflect differences in animal populations, animal-based industries, and disease threats. Programs for historically important diseases, such as tuberculosis and brucellosis, tend to be fairly similar between states and are based on well-established federal standards. Programs for newer diseases or newer forms of agriculture, such as farm-raised deer and aquaculture, tend to be more variable.

Animal health fees fund about 19% of Wisconsin's animal health program operations. In the surrounding states, by contrast, animal health program operations are funded almost entirely by state general fund appropriations. Some states charge almost no license fees. Other states charge fees but deposit them to the state general fund (so they do not have a direct impact on program appropriations).

Minnesota

The state-funded portion of Minnesota's animal health program is funded 98% by state general fund appropriations and 2% by industry fees. The farm-raised deer (chronic wasting disease control) program is the only program that charges fees. That fee is $10 per farm-raised deer, up to maximum of $100 per herd.

Iowa

The state-funded portion of Iowa's animal health program is funded 100% by state general fund appropriations. Iowa charges nominal industry fees that are deposited to the state general fund. The cost to collect the fees (which are set by statute) exceeds the amount of revenue produced. Fees include the following:

- $50 for an annual animal market license, plus $10 for each market agent.
- $25 for an annual animal dealer license, plus $10 for each dealer agent.
- $5 for an annual pig dealer license, plus $3 for each dealer agent.
- $3 for an annual poultry buyer license.
- $10 for an annual hatchery license.
- $25 to register a livestock brand for 5 years.
- $10 for an annual sheep dealer license.
- $10 for an annual bull breeder license.

Michigan

The state-funded portion of Michigan's animal health program is funded 95% by state general fund appropriations, 2% by segregated fees from racing, and 3% by animal industry fees. Michigan fees include the following:

- $400 for an annual livestock market (auction) license.
- $250 for an annual livestock collection point (buy station) license.
- $150 for an annual horse market (auction) license.
- $50 for an annual livestock dealer license.
- $100 for an annual fish farm license ($75 for a renewal).

Illinois

The state-funded portion of Illinois' animal health program is funded 100% by state general fund appropriations, except that part of its poultry program (eggs) is funded by industry fees. The state also charges some lab testing fees for non-traditional diseases. Illinois charges nominal license fees that are deposited to the state general fund. The cost to collect the fees (which are set by statute) exceeds the amount of revenue produced. Fees include the following:

- $200 for an annual livestock market (auction) license.
- $25 for an annual livestock dealer license ($10 for a renewal license), plus $10 for each additional business location and $5 for each dealer agent.
- $25 for an annual feeder swine dealer license ($10 for a renewal license), plus $5 for each dealer agent.
