Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill establishes a labor concession lien. (A lien is a charge against property to secure a debt.) Under the bill, an employer and a union may agree to permit the union to receive a labor concession lien against the property of the employer at the employment site at which the employes work if the union makes wage or benefits concessions in order to secure future anticipated benefits.

If the benefits anticipated are not received, the union may enforce the lien, up to the value of the concessions. The lien may be enforced against personal property in the same manner that security interests are enforced under the uniform commercial code or enforced against real property in the same manner in which construction liens are enforced.
