identity while committing a crime and providing a penalty.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, if a person commits a crime while his or her usual appearance is concealed, disguised or altered with the intent to make it less likely that he or she will be identified with the crime, the penalties for the crime may be increased. If the crime is a misdemeanor, the maximum fine may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased so that the revised maximum term is one year in jail. If the crime is a felony, the maximum fine may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum fine may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be increased by not more than $10,000 and the maximum imprisonment may be i

This bill provides that if a person commits a crime while assuming a false identity the penalties for the crime may be increased in the same manner as that provided under current law for a person who commits a crime with his or her usual appearance concealed, disguised or altered.
