Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law requires the Division of Banking in the Department of Financial Institutions (division) to examine each state-chartered savings and loan association (savings and loan) at least once every 18 months, unless the division accepts an examination by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the federal Office of Thrift Supervision, or any other governmental agency authorized to make such examinations pursuant to that agency's rules and regulations. Any such alternative examination must comply with the division's procedures. Current law also requires the division to examine each state-chartered savings bank (savings bank) at least once every 18 months. Current law has a different, though similar, alternative examination provision applicable to state-chartered banks (state banks). Current law does not permit the division to accept an alternative examination of a savings bank.

This bill changes the alternative examination provision applicable to savings and loans, making it substantially similar to the alternative examination provision applicable to state banks. Thus, under the bill, the division may accept any examination that may have been made of a savings and loan within a reasonable period by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the federal Office of Thrift

Supervision, any other federal agency that supervises and examines savings and loans, or any agency of another state with primary responsibility for supervising savings and loans chartered under the laws of that state. The bill deletes the requirement that any such examination must comply with the division's procedures. The bill also creates a substantially similar alternative examination procedure applicable to savings banks.
