Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, the secretary of natural resources must designate an attorney in the department of natural resources (DNR) as the public intervenor. With the approval of the 8-member public intervenor board, which consists of gubernatorial and legislative appointees, the public intervenor may intervene in administrative proceedings, including contested case hearings and rule-making proceedings, consistent with the public intervenor's duty to protect public rights in water and other natural resources.

This bill restores the duties and authority of the public intervenor that existed before 1995 Wisconsin Act 27 (budget act). The bill transfers the public intervenor from DNR to the department of justice. The bill generally authorizes the public intervenor to formally commence and intervene in all proceedings before any court where the intervention is needed to protect public rights in water and other natural resources. The bill directs the attorney general to appoint the public intervenor.

Under current law, DNR and the department of agriculture, trade and consumer protection are each administered by a secretary who is nominated by the governor, and with the advice and consent of the senate appointed, to serve at the pleasure of the governor. The bill restores the authority to appoint both of those secretaries to the respective governing boards of those departments.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
