6 licenses and granting rule-making authority.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, a person must satisfy certain education requirements before he or she is allowed to take the examination for a nursing home administrator license. Specifically, he or she must complete a regular course of study, equivalent specialized courses or a program of study that is considered adequate academic preparation for nursing home administration by the nursing home administrator examining board (examining board). In addition, the examining board is required to develop and enforce standards regarding the supervised practical experience that is required for a person to be licensed as a nursing home administrator. A person may satisfy the supervised practical experience requirements before or after taking the examination.

This bill changes the requirements that a person must satisfy before taking the nursing home administrator examination. Under the bill, a person must satisfy certain education and supervised practical experience requirements before he or she can take the examination. Regarding education, the bill requires a person to have either: 1) a bachelor's, master's or doctoral degree with a health care administration or long-term care major; or 2) a bachelor's degree and completion of a specialized course in nursing home administration. The bill directs the examining board to promulgate rules establishing the supervised practical experience requirements. The rules must require a person to complete at least 2,000 hours in an internship, administrator-in-training program or other structured program before he or she can take the examination. The 2,000 hours must be completed in any consecutive three-year period within the five-year period immediately preceding the date of application for the examination.

Also under current law, a person who has a nursing home administrator license in another state is eligible for a reciprocal nursing home administrator license if he or she satisfies certain requirements, including submitting satisfactory evidence of the person's qualifications to the examining board. This bill specifies the qualifications that a person must have to be eligible for a reciprocal license. Under the bill, an applicant for such a license must have a bachelor's degree or be certified as a nursing home administrator by the American College of Health Care Administrators and must have practiced as a nursing home administrator in good standing for at least 2,000 hours in any consecutive three-year period within the five-year period immediately preceding the date of application for the reciprocal license. Also, the applicant must not have an arrest or conviction record the circumstances of which substantially relate to nursing home administration. Finally, the person must pass an examination relating to state and federal laws governing the practice of nursing home administration.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
