Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, a physician may issue a do-not-resuscitate order, under limited conditions, for a person who is aged at least 18 and who has a terminal condition or a medical condition such that, if the person suffered cardiac or pulmonary failure, resuscitation would be unsuccessful or would pose an extraordinary burden on the person. The person must request the order, unless the person is incapacitated and the order is requested by the person's guardian or health care agent; the person or the person's guardian or health care agent must consent to the order after having been provided with information about procedures that the person is choosing to forego; the order must be in writing and signed by the person, or the person's guardian or health care agent; and the physician must not know that the person is pregnant. If these conditions are met, the physician must document in the person's medical record the medical condition that qualifies the person for the do-not-resuscitate order, must make the order in writing, and must affix to the person's wrist a do-not-resuscitate bracelet that meets standards specified by the department of health and family services (DHFS) or provide an order form to permit the person to order a do-not-resuscitate bracelet from a commercial vendor that is approved by DHFS. A physician, emergency medical technician, first responder, health care professional, or emergency health care facility is not civilly or criminally liable and the physician, emergency medical technician, first responder, or health care professional may not be charged with unprofessional conduct for withholding or withdrawing resuscitation from a patient under a do-not-resuscitate order.

ASSEMBLY BILL 503

This bill permits a person also to use a do-not-resuscitate necklace that meets DHFS standards or that is from a vendor approved by DHFS, as well as a bracelet, to indicate issuance of a do-not-resuscitate order for that person.
